Dear Miss McCraig, Feb 25, 1914

I do not wish to be drawn into any public controversy with regard to the examination system in the High Schools, and have nothing to say with regard to the way in which they are now conducted, so that I should not like my name to be quoted one way or another. However on the general question as to examinations I believe that, if they are nor overdone they are a very useful means of education, and I should not like to see them abolished and admittance to the university granted on certificate alone.

Yours sincerely,
